The Dylan Amsterdam reveals 'Vinkeles'

Juni 2008

After times of excitement the own name for the restaurant of The Dylan Amsterdam was finally revealed!

With a lot of enthusiasm the name was revealed to the present guests. At the same time also the new logo was presented.

During the presentation the invited guests enjoyed a lunch prepared by Executive Chef Dennis Kuipers and his crew. The dishes from the traditional French cuisine combined with a 'touch' from now enjoyed the culinary lovers.

The name Vinkeles originally comes from Reinier Vinkeles, a famous engraver from the time of Jacob van Campen. One of the most famous pieces from the hand of Vinkeles is the copperplate from the gate of the first theater of Amsterdam created by Jacob van Campen. Nowadays this gate is the entrance to The Dylan Amsterdam and Vinkeles.

The combination of the rich history en the fact that the name is easy to pronounce for both Dutch as well as International guests, lead to the choice of the name Vinkeles.

Vinkeles; a new face, a new name, a renewed restaurant on a beautiful and well known place at one of the most famous canals of Amsterdam.
